Photoshop also is available as a web-based application in Adobe's Creative Cloud, from which you can access it at www.adobe.com/products/creativecloud. Illustrator is a vector graphic-based program that, like Photoshop, is primarily used for the creation and editing of graphics or shapes. Although it doesn't offer as much flexibility in creation and editing of raster-based images as Photoshop does, it does have a wide variety of drawing tools that are usually basic enough to create just about any image you may need to illustrate. Like Photoshop, Illustrator uses the same layer-based editing system that allows raster images to be manipulated with layers. Illustrator also has a basic clipping mask feature and can even create animated GIFs. Why use Photoshop and Illustrator? Adobe has the two most-used programs in graphic creation. They're usually used together, because creating documents with Illustrator and then transferring them to Photoshop for editing is not as simple as it should be, because Photoshop can't use the Illustrator layers. So, Illustrator is best for design and Photoshop for editing. Illustrator is a design tool, so you need to pay attention to fonts, spacing, and other design elements that the design needs to be set in order. Illustrator is typically used for this type of work because it's very graphic oriented. Photoshop is a raster imaging program, so it's not suitable for graphic design unless you're creating very simplistic images. The clipping mask feature is helpful for repairing damaged parts of images or producing a different background. I cover this subject in Chapter 9. Photoshop Elements is a free, raster-based, design-oriented program that has some of the features of Illustrator and often comes bundled with Photoshop. It also has many of Photoshop's other useful features. Working with Figure Types Not all figures are created equal. When creating your own figures, you need to be sure to catch mistakes before they happen. Using the proper tools and following best practices helps you avoid common mistakes, such as mislabeling a figure on a graph or inaccurately scaling a photograph. A big part of using good graphics is being able to find the correct figure types. These terms stand for graph, picture, chart, map, diagram, and graph. Each of these types has special characteristics you need to know before you create your own figures. Know your graph types

I've had my 1997 Excalibur in top condition for several years and it was ready to hit the road. To give it another whirl, I swapped over my favorite parts from my 1998 Excalibur that I'd been replacing worn parts with for the past few months. The only thing that was new was a smaller front fender made in 1997 and the original rear brake light. Whenever I drive the '97, it feels like it is only getting the minimal attention it needs. I've gotten used to waiting for the part in the rear tire to start slipping, as well as noticing a bit of condition when driving it that I did not for the '98. But, since it is such a used part, it is hard to imagine that there aren't a few kinks in the road that I should have noticed. I think that I've finally adjusted to the '97 and it has actually been good for me to drive; however, I am reminded of the effort and effort needed to get used to driving a 1998. RPMs The after market ball bearing/drive shafts on the last Excalibur models were known to have a particular RPM pattern. It is common practice to document the rotating speed of your vehicle to ensure it matches with that of the Excalibur. There were two distinct trends, neither of which I am familiar with. Here's what I did find out about each of them: • Trend 1: 8700-9250 RPM. It seems to be the average for these cars. My car was 9350 on the top. • Trend 2: 8500-8800 RPM, although my car was 8810 on the bottom. Normally, when the RPM is listed as a range, it means that any two of the values within this range are in sequence. A good way to determine if your RPM is in the upper or lower range is to simply look at the next number. For example, the number 9080 is further from the 9000 you see in 9820 than that in 9250. In a word, I'm not sure what this trend means. Engine I ran across some of this information while reading the binder that came with the Excalibur frame: • The motor is a chain drive-type (4WD-TDI, 4WD-TDI 4000), with the outside rear wheel driven by a shift

The semifinals will be played on the 20th of August (13:00-18:00 CEST), while the Grand Final will be played on the 21st of August (19:00-23:00 CEST). Since there are only 5 teams that participated in the tournaments for the Top 2 League slots of the main TI9 event (the 25th of August), we will get to the main event with our 4th place finals that will take place on the 25th of August. After all the drama happened in the main tournament, to make sure that our players don't get disqualified or banned for the main event, we would like to give them a chance to prove themselves on their home turf and for those that have lost out on Top 2 League, they will have a chance to make up for their bad luck and the disappointment of missing out on the main event. All of our players have the same amount of chances, meaning that the exact methods and schedules used for team selection remain the same, and no special changes to the schedule can be made. As many of you may have noticed, we had planned to have our pre-main event tournament between 14th and 21st of August, with the $2600 prize pool and 2 $500 prizes given to the 1st and 2nd places, but unfortunately due to the 2nd place player having registered on a fake passport, he was unable to attend the tournament as well.
