Run Macros through the keyboard Keymacro is a tool that enables you to run macros through the keyboard. It is designed to replace the need for using a mouse or trackpad to run macros. With Keymacro you can define macros or sequences of actions for quick access to frequently used actions, such as formatting a drive, opening a program, running a search, or executing a command. Keymacro can also be used to automate tasks on your Mac. It offers one key shortcuts that can be used to access all the Mac apps. For example, you can create a macro that automatically uploads a new photo from the camera to an image-sharing service, or to an email address. The application offers two ways to define macros. The first way is to define the keystrokes with the keyboard directly. A blue keyboard icon indicates that a macro is active. You can also define macros through keystroke icons that represent the specific app. For example, an iOS icon indicates a macro for the iOS app. You can assign a function to the icon that you press to run a defined macro. For example, pressing an iOS icon executes the iOS iTunes importer macro. You can also have multiple apps run in succession by using keystroke icons. For example, pressing the iOS icon twice runs the iPhone importer macro and sends the photo to the Photos app, and pressing it again runs the Photos app's share menu so you can share it with a friend. Keymacro can be used with a mouse to redefine keystrokes. You can also assign a function to a mouse button to run a macro. For example, holding the Command key while clicking on the mouse icon runs the iOS importer macro. When defining macros you need to use the keyboard's symbols to designate keystrokes. You can also use the space bar to assign a function. For example, pressing the Space bar during the defining phase runs the Photos app to view the photos in the Photos library. To execute the defined macro, you need to type in the function icon as the first keystroke. Keymacro offers additional options that can make macro creation easier. When a macro is running you can pause or stop the running macro. You can also assign a keyboard shortcut to a macro that can be used to run the macro. Download Keymacro 4 for free today.
