Cerebral white matter lesions (WMLs) are neuroimaging lesions associated with aging and dementia. The mechanism underlying this association is unknown. The authors tested the hypothesis that WMLs, a marker of cerebral small vessel disease, may be directly injurious to cerebral microvessels of the white matter. Using confocal and electron microscopy, they identified vascular endothelial cells (ECs) lining WMLs in autopsied brains of cognitively intact elderly people. They compared the morphology of these ECs with those of ECs found outside of WMLs and those found in association with other vessel types in the white matter. They further tested their hypothesis in an experimental animal model of chronic hypertension, where WMLs were induced surgically in animals fed a high-salt, high-protein diet. The authors found ECs lining the WMLs and found that the cells were morphologically altered in the WMLs compared with ECs lining normal vessels. ECs lining WMLs were found in association with collagen IV deposits, elastin deposits, macrophages, and basement membrane components. Cells lining WMLs had a rounded or flat nucleus and were associated with swelling and nuclear division. In the experimental animal model of hypertension, ECs lining WMLs contained activated nuclear factor kappaB; nuclear factor kappaB was not observed in WMLs without ECs. ECs lining WMLs in the human brain are damaged and activated. These findings suggest a novel pathway whereby WMLs are involved in cognitive decline and dementia.Comparison of ad 0cc13bf012

I've tried setting the Mask attribute to "" and using DisplayFormat but it doesn't seem to work. Here is my code: " DisabledViewState="True" Height="24px" SelectionChangeCommitted="droplist_SelectionChangeCommitted" onselectedindexchanged="Droplist_SelectedIndexChanged" SkinID="DropDownListWithMask" AppendDataBoundItems="True" ScrollBars="Both"> And here is what my code behind looks like: string gender = drpGender.Selectedltem.Text.Trim().Replace(" ", " ").Replace(" ", "").Trim(); The label I placed first will display hidden and is the one that I'm trying to remove. But the selected value will display fine as it is supposed to. Any ideas? EDIT: This appears to be a more specific problem to a solution. EDIT2: Nope, still didn't work. EDIT3: Finally figured it out. I was using this to actually change the selected value: string gender = drpGender.SelectedValue.To
