In this study, 4- to 7-year-olds' anticipatory saccades to delayed visual feedback were compared to their non-verbal intelligence, as measured by the Bayley Scales of Infant Development (Bayley, 1986). During each trial, a display of a moving dot, which provided no visual information, was presented. After a delay of 3 to 10 seconds, the dot moved and children were required to make an anticipatory saccade to the moving dot. Across three studies, the same number of trials were presented to each child. The performance of 4-year-olds was poorer than that of 5- and 6-year-olds. Among the three groups, older children had better anticipatory saccade latencies and higher non-verbal intelligence scores. There was a significant linear relationship between age and percent fixation time for the trials with the longest delays. Moreover, 6-year-olds were significantly better than 5-year-olds in predicting future performance on a test of delayed visual feedback responses. These findings are discussed in relation to past reports showing that infants' anticipatory fixations are predictive of motor performance, and that these measures of non-verbal intelligence are associated with emerging verbal competence.. The victim of a New Jersey woman running a prostitution ring received at least $60,000 while she was held at the woman's home, according to a report. Prosecutors said Nicole Menzel, 24, of Brick faced charges of prostitution and harboring a fugitive for allegedly extorting the victim — known only as Mary — after she and a friend demanded $2,000 a week from her in exchange for letting her live in their home, the Asbury Park Press reported. Investigators said they found the purported prostitute in Menzel's home when they executed a search warrant at her home on April 5, the Press reported. They said they were tipped off to the scheme when the woman returned from Indiana with her son, prosecutors said. “She never said a word and gave them money,” Brick County Prosecutor Robert D. Laurino told the Press. “For some reason, she was persuaded.” Menzel was jailed on $500,000 bail and faces up to 20 years in state prison if convicted on the charges, according to the Press. She is due in court Tuesday.Roosters winger Jorge Taufua has put in two outstanding displays in reserve grade — both with the confidence to show the biggest supporters at Allianz Stadium in Canberra.
