Q: Use of scope: true in a model helper (Spree) I am working on an application built on Spree, the e-commerce web application that runs on Rails. I need to have the ability to pass dynamic content into each of the products model's columns. I found the format.html declaration helpful but is unable to use its parameters, like display_format, in a model. This works without a scope but doesn't work if I declare scope: true: format.html scope: true, as: :html_product, as: :line_items, keys: ["front_images", "back_images"] do |part| part.display_format = "{{product.front_images[0].name}}" part.content_tag(:p, "front_images".html_safe) part.content_tag(:p, "back_images".html_safe) end I receive the following error: unable to parse formatter: template argument 1 is invalid How can I pass dynamic content to a model? A: I had the same problem. I have a Spree::OrderItem and wanted to pass content to the product model in the following way: As scope: true is used with e.g. orders I searched for a solution: The solution is to use the order.cancellation in the helper or a block like this: # helper formats = order.cancellation.format # controller @format = formats[:html] resulting in this in the order document: Hope this helps!

Q: Difference between onClickListener and onclick in android? What is the exact difference between two? why android doesn't use onClickListener? is there any benefit of using one over the other? A: onClick is a method of activity which invokes the onClick method. onClickListener is the interface which implements all the methods which are written in onClick. So the following is the difference: onClick() with Activity This will directly invoke the onClick method of the activity and hence it will perform the specified task. Click Listener with Activity This creates a listener and invokes the method onClick, which is present in the activity. onClick (with Interface) The method written in the activity, is passed as a parameter to the method in the interface, and then it is invoked. A: onClick is a method of a particular Activity whereas onClickListener is a Class which implements onClick() onClick is used in xml layout as well whereas onClickListener is only implemented in Activity class. A standard Activity implements onClickListener() and overrides onClick() method. Estrogen regulates protein expression of cellular growth-related kinase and beta-catenin in human glioblastoma cells. We have previously identified IGF-II as a regulator of the phosphorylation of cellular growth-related kinase (CGRK) in cultured human glioblastoma cells. In this study, we further investigated estrogen's role in regulating the protein expression of CGRK and beta-catenin in C6 human glioblastoma cells. For the experiments, glioblastoma cells were cultured in hormone-deprived medium for 72 h, and the medium was then changed to the control medium (without hormones). Medium was then collected every 12 h for a 24-h period. The changes in protein expression of CGRK and beta-catenin were determined by Western blotting. The results showed that C6 glioblastoma cells continuously expressed CGRK and beta-catenin from 12 to 24 h after the change from hormone-deprived medium to the control medium. In the presence of estrogen, CGRK expression was suppressed by >50% (P
