if you are unable to access the settings menu or if you cannot find your google account, try removing the smartphone and reinserting it, turn off the handset and turn it on again. if you are still unable to reset the settings after a complete reboot, visit the device manufacturer's website and follow their instructions. if, on the other hand, you are not able to access the settings menu or find your google account on your android smartphone, check to see whether you have entered your gmail account details using a different account than the one that is currently signed in. google, however, does not recommend users to do this as it will only cause confusion and even lead to loss of data. the user must be informed of any pending phone updates and must be given the opportunity to accept the update at their discretion. the update is placed in the user's personal workspace, where the user will see a message about the pending update. if the user completes the update, the device is re-provisioned using the updated devicepolicyandroid, replacing the original policy as a result. the user will be able to attempt to re-provision the device as many times as needed before the system administrator will be able to permanently enable the updated policy. [c-7] should send the android.permission.manage_users permission to a profile owner app during the provisioning of a new account. the user should be able to perform basic user management, including suspend and unsuspend users, revoke and unlock users, enable / disable accounts, and reset passwords. to enable these features, the profile owner app should request the android.manage_users permission.
