About: Check out Itemsy on Chrome Web Store: Mozilla is working on a new project called Servo that will change the way web pages render themselves. It's a programming project with a specific goal in mind: improving the performance of the web. The project was officially announced at the HTML5Rocks Conference in Vancouver on Monday. It will be the first big project from Mozilla to try to improve the performance of web pages. This isn't the first time that Mozilla has announced a project called Servo. Mozilla launched it in 2012.
