A collection of five unique environments, one for each chapter of Lotus Bloom, with its own musical score and written haikus that you can read while playing. Environments are inspired by the concept of being in a dream. Cave, Forest, Ocean, Land and Swamp, all blended into one space as an indication of a sense of unconsciousness. Small and big details in all the environments are done in a unique way. Combined with the musical scores composed by Mitsuru Kotani, each chapter of the game comes with its own musical experience. Further info: Key Features: In Lotus Bloom you play alone. After you have completed the game you can view the credits and enjoy the music for free. All musical scores are included in the game, the Haiku are available for free and users can read them during the game. Each musical score has a specific theme: (1) Follow the story in the cave (2) No matter how far you go, life will be over soon (3) The forest is part of your everyday life, the same as the sky (4) Don't wake the sleeping forest, if you look closely you will see, slowly they will turn into a dream (5) The ocean of the subconsciousness.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. is increasing public health and safety precautions at the border in response to the coronavirus outbreak, Homeland Security Secretary Chad Wolf announced on Thursday, telling reporters that his agency is closely coordinating with state and local officials to determine the best approach at border crossings. "We have a robust operations plan to enhance the health and safety of our officers and families," Wolf said, standing alongside senior officials at the Department of Homeland Security. Wolf said the Department of Homeland Security has "a pretty robust operations plan" and has worked with CBP's Border Patrol agents, Transportation Security Administration officers, the Border Patrol and Health and Human Services to help identify where the border is "most vulnerable" and "most at risk." Under that plan, he said, DHS now has a "draft advisory" that DHS's Office of Health Services and DHS's Office of the Secretary share with the CDC and Department of Health and Human Services and suggests several measures state and local authorities can take to curb the spread of COVID-19. In previous briefing, DHS Secretary Wolf said that the CDC and State and local officials are also helping

What's new in Blob.io:

Runewards: Strategy Card Game is a text-based strategy card game which uses its own rupz cards instead of regular ones. The game was developed by Victor Dietz as a vehicle to learn Python & HTML5. Features Runewards: Strategy Card Game is a game that gives players the opportunity to collect, trade, upgrade, or sell cards to aid their chosen faction in an ongoing battle. The cards can be traded between the two factions using a Mass Transfer List GUI Source Game Two factions are vying for control of a shared, distant star in an Age of Endless War. Each side is granted access to certain technologies that spawn buildings and special units, along with the ability to spend large quantities of cash on research, upgrades, and recruitment. The War Plane uses its unique ability to carry infantry units, as well as specialized troops, and mobile weapons across interstellar distances at a fraction of the cost of conventional transportation. Game technology Runewards: Strategy Card Game is an object-oriented Python 2.7 game using tkinter. It communicates with the MySQL database using mysqldb. The mobile version uses PhoneGap to create a hybrid app for Android devices. Cards Each faction and unit has a unique card, which can be viewed in the gallery. Runewards uses one rupz card for each Runeward Artifact, Planar Power (that is, a frequently accessed, fixed card), or Worldly Influence card. In Runewards, the cards in the game can be played into one of four different categories: Spheres (colored maroon in the gallery): These show up in a top off section of the game window, rotating around the game model. Each Sphere has three stats that affect its usefulness for the player: Trap: Reduces the number of enemy units in a tactical zone by one. Artefact: Increases the strength or resilience of that unit. Planar Power: Increase the movement speed of a single character. Worldly Influence: General boost to the stats of a faction. Worldly Influence is generally the most powerful card in Runewards: Strategy Card Game, but it only helps while the player holds the card on the game board. Planar Powers There are a number of Planar Powers available in Runewards: Strategy Card Game. Generally, each Planar Power has a color, as well as
